Judging Criteria - contracts

- 1 Each contract entered will be visited by two judges. Judges will be nominated by FIS and will be persons of repute within the industry.
- 2 Judges must be able to view all the works in the contract submitted.
- 3 Clients must be informed that the contract has been entered into the award scheme and be agreeable to judging and publicity.
- 4 The contractor must be present on site when the entry is being judged. It is a condition of entry that the contractor is present, failure to do so will result in loss of marks.
- 5 All entries will be judged regardless of size and value. The criteria for technical merit will take into account accepted good practice and relevant British Standards and Codes of Practice.
- 6 The decision of the judges will be final, having taken into consideration the spirit as well as the letter of the award scheme.
- 7 The contractor should advise the client that judges will not discuss workmanship quality or other aspects of the installation during their visit (beyond establishing answers to items 1 to 5; see Important Notes item E).

Judging Criteria – Apprentice of the Year

- 8 The nominee should have successfully completed at least six months of their apprenticeship at intermediate or advanced level at the closing date.
- 9 The judges will be looking for:

Important Notes: Please read before entering

- A) It is imperative that the winning projects are representative of first-class skills producing standards of work of which our industry can be proud. Entries should therefore reflect the highest overall standard that the individual FIS member has achieved during the award scheme year.
- B) For the purpose of this award scheme, the judgement is made on a partial survey and is largely based on the visual workmanship and aesthetics of the installation. Any award or written comments made on the works entered does not in any way signify that FIS warrants or underwrites the installation. FIS is not accountable for any defects that may become apparent during or after the completion of the works.
- C) The judges carry out their task with thoroughness and objectivity. Contracts are scored on the following broad criteria:
 - Visual quality of workmanship
 - Complexity of installation
 - Project delivery/client satisfaction
 - Defects/snagging
 - Ambiance/aesthetics/overall appearance of project
 - Innovation, design and sustainability

- D) Consideration will of course be given to the age of the installation as completion dates within the award scheme will vary. At the time of judging, no allowances are made for uncorrected work or snagging which may be planned but is still to be carried out. A lot may happen to your work after you have left site – through no fault of your own – and you should recheck your work and correct any defects prior to the judges' visit.
- E) As well as physically checking the entries for the award scheme, judges will want to establish from the client whether:
1. The contract was won by, for example, competitive tender, nominated contract or negotiated contract.
 2. The contractor's site labour was professional, efficient and co-operative.
 3. The work was started and finished to an agreed schedule.
 4. The client obtained the quality of work and type of installation he anticipated when placing his order.
 5. The client was aware that the contractor was a member of FIS prior to awarding the contract.
